

Discover Bears Ears

with Andrew Gulliford &
Canyon Country Discovery Center

---

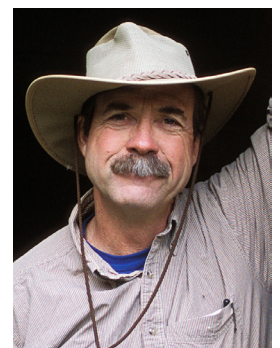

Bears Ears National Monument is a profoundly unique landscape of deep redrock canyons, soaring monoliths, and a long colorful human history. With over 100,000 archeological sites one could spend a lifetime exploring the cliff-dwellings, petroglyph panels, and hidden treasures of this region.

Join award-winning author and historian Andrew Gulliford along with the Canyon Country Discovery Center for an eye-opening and thought-provoking tour of the Bears Ears National Monument. Over three days we will explore Ancestral Puebloan cliff dwellings, hike through breathtaking canyons, and enjoy the colorful conversation of one of this regions premier historians. Along the way you will enjoy beautiful campsites, delicious food, and an experience you are sure to remember.

Andrew Gulliford is a professor of history and Environmental Studies at Fort Lewis College in Durango, Colorado. He teaches popular courses on wilderness, national parks, Western and Environmental history. He is the author of Outdoors in the Southwest, Sacred Objects and Sacred Places: Preserving Tribal Traditions, and Boomtown Blues: Colorado Oil Shale, which won the Colorado Book Award.

Gulliford has had led tours across the West for the Smithsonian Institution, National Geographic Society, the National Trust for Historic Preservation, Rocky Mountain Public Broadcasting Service (PBS), and many others.

Dates: March 29th - April 1st, 2018

Cost: $699

Space is limited to 10 guests, Call 435-587-2156 to reserve your spot

Contact David Taft, Adventure Director, for more information at DTaft@FourCornersSchool.org or 435-587-2156x1021