President's Message

Dear SJBAS Members:

I hope you had a wonderful holiday and I wish you a Happy New Year!!

The Annual Meeting and Holiday Brunch were held at Ft. Lewis College on December 4th. The highlight was the presentations given by our two John W. Sanders Fall Interns-- Rachel Morris and Kegan Roady. They explained the projects they worked on at the Center for Southwest Studies and were both very thankful for the support they received from SJBAS. They were excellent speakers!

The Silent Auction brought in more than $1,100. The auction items were donated by the estate of Linda and Richard Robinson and the proceeds will be used to support Native American programs per their request. Rhonda Raffo organized, priced, and set up the auction sheets - thank you, Rhonda, for your invaluable work.

I also want to thank the many volunteers—led by Michelle and Mark McKibben-- who helped set up, decorate, set out the auction items, and clean up. We appreciate your willingness to be involved!

VOLUNTEERS NEEDED - We are looking for volunteers to fill the Membership Chair position and the Webmaster positions. The Membership Chair is a Board member who communicates with new and returning SJBAS members and visitors that attend our monthly meetings. The Webmaster keeps the SJBAS website up to date. Training will be provided. Please contact me at sc53hicks@gmail.com if you would like to find out more about these positions. Volunteering is a great way to get to know people and contribute to our organization.

CHECK IT OUT - the 2022 Field Trip Schedule is included in this Moki. Descriptions, difficulty ratings and contact information are included. Sign up early for the trips you would like to participate in.

Keeping my fingers crossed that Covid disappears during 2022 so we can all feel comfortable attending next year's Brunch and in-person meetings again.

Sincerely, Susan Hicks SJBAS President

SJBAS December 4, 2021 Annual Meeting highlights

The following nominees were unanimously elected to be the 2022 SJBAS officers:

President: Susan Hicks

Vice President: Hunter McCleary

Secretary: Mary Rieke

Treasurer: Mary Moorehead

Thank yous were made to departing Board Members, Lyle Hancock, Randy Graham, Rhonda Raffo, and Denise Galley; Bev and Guy Tomberlin for their donation of over 100 books; Shelby Tisdale, retiring director of the Center for Southwest Studies for her support of SJBAS and our interns; and Andy Gulliford for volunteering to lead several field trips in 2021.

Field Trips, Speakers and Events for 2022

See SJBAS.org for details on each of these field trips or events. You must be a SJBAS member to participate in field trips. All are welcome to attend speaking events.

Modified Field Trip Covid Policy

The SJBAS field trip policy remains the same as published in the June Moki.

Briefs

Vibration damage from aircraft flying near pre-historic ruins has been suspected for decades. This has been a problem particularly for tourist and military aircraft. Some sites are installing sensors to at least capture baseline measurements. Among those are Montezuma Castle National Monument and Tonto National Monument, both in Arizona. This picture from earlier this month shows Park Service staff installing sensors at Montezuma NM.

Duck Symbolism in Basketmaker Rock Art. Most of us probably have a book on their shelf by rock art expert Polly Schaafsma. On January 4th Archaeology Southwest is hosting a Zoom by the rock art icon herself. She will speak on "Ducks, Power, and the San Juan Basketmakers." For more information or to register go here.

Succession of volcanos served as catalyst for the development of SW cultures. A new study published in Antiquity magazine found that regional volcanic eruptions in 536 AD and 541 AD and one huge one in Iceland contributed directly to the rise of the Ancestral Puebloan culture. Researchers from UCLA and CSU used tree ring data to measure climactic conditions and tie those into the timing of cultural changes. While frigid temperatures devastated Europe at the time, in the Southwest these temperatures forced dispersed communities to move closer together. Technology sharing (think basket making and later, pottery) and agriculture blossomed. You can also read about the findings in Smithsonian.

To Save Spruce Tree House or Let Nature Take its Course. An article in National Parks Traveler summarizes the dilemma facing the Park Service over the decades-long effort to save the third largest cliff dwelling at Mesa Verde. The picture to the left was taken in the 1940s. The Park Service is taking public comments through January 6. You can read the article here.

Lawsuit or Land Swap? Even as both sides ramp up for lawsuits over the restoration of Bears Ears, there is a move afoot to placate Utah's aggrieved right wing with a land swap of 135,000 acres of state-owned land within the Monument for Federal land elsewhere in Utah. The development is reported in C&E News.

The just published "Prehistoric Rock Art in Scotland may not seem relevant to the Southwest but SJBAS member and archaeologist Lorie Hansen says it is worth a read. It has insightful sections on "How do we record rock art," "Caring for rock art," and "Valuing rock art." You can read the entire volume online here.

Manitou Cliff Dwellings: Educational setting or perpetuator of stereotypes? Most of us have seen Manitou Cliff Dwellings from the highway as we pass through Colorado Springs. A recent story by Colorado Public Radio examines the story behind the semi-faux cliff dwellings. Some Native Americans are starting to speak out about how the dwellings were taken from their original site in the Four Corners and re-assembled using less-than-authentic materials. Moreover, the interpretive signs and tour guides still use language that is "insulting" to Ancestral Puebloan descendants. You can read the article on the CPR website here.
